CUPE 3902 (Unit 3) Job Posting

Urban Studies Program Sessional Lecturer Position (2017 Fall Session)

Course Title: INI338H1F: Advanced Topics in Urban Studies: Infrastructure and Community Benefits

Posting Date: May 1, 2017

Closing Date: May 29, 2017 @ 5pm

Course description: Cities around the world are under strain, physically, economically and socially. Governments at all levels in Canada are beginning to adopt approaches to ensure that spending on physical infrastructure brings more benefits to residents and communities at the local level. By leveraging dollars that are already being spent on infrastructure, communities can maximize the economic and social returns, including opportunities for local workforce and economic development, public realm improvements and affordable housing. This course looks at the different ways in which community benefits are used by cities around the world, with a focus on how they are typically tied to infrastructure projects.
